

Dana Investment Advisors joins Investor Network on Climate Risk (INCR)

We are very pleased to announce that Dana Investment Advisors has joined the Ceres-led Investor Network on Climate Risk (INCR). The INCR has over 120 members including the largest institutional investors, representing over $14 trillion in assets. INCR members are advocating, engaging and influencing companies, financial market regulators and government policies to address climate and sustainability risks and opportunities.

In January 2016, Dana and many other firms attended the Investor Summit on Climate Risk at the United Nations in New York City. This Summit was co-hosted by nonprofit, sustainability leader, Ceres, the United Nations Foundation and the United Nations Office for Partnerships. Held on the heels of the historic climate change agreement at the UN Conference on Climate Change (COP21), the Summit brought together world and business leaders in order to mobilize capital and accelerate the move toward a low-carbon economy. We applaud Ceres for their leadership and are delighted to collaborate with INCR members in a shared mission to build a thriving, sustainable global economy.

Dana Investment Advisors has been managing Socially Responsible strategies since early 2000. We actively integrate environmental, social and governance analytics into our quantitative modeling and fundamental investment processes. As the gap often widens between those companies that develop and deploy innovative solutions and those that don't, we believe companies that strive to mitigate and resolve climate change impacts and resource constraints will be defining characteristics of successful investments in the years ahead.
